ADD MORE EVIDENCE

Do better research and read more sources to reveal extra arguments and supporting evidence for your essay.

1

USE EXPERT QUOTES

Think of quotations from famous people to add as supporting elements whenever appropriate.

2

ADD MORE EXAMPLES

Come up with several examples to support every argument you use in the essay. Two are better (and longer) than one.

3

WRITE TRANSITION WORDS

Frame arguments and connect sentences with transition phrases. It's a natural way to increase length and bring essay parts together.

4

USE DESCRIPTIVE LANGUAGE

Add adjectives, adverbs, and sensory details to your essay. Consider literary techniques like metaphors, contrast, tautology, etc.

5

TRY ESSAY EXTENDER

AI tools can help you revise sentences and paragraphs, making them longer. Don't copy them but use them as a draft for further revision.

6

TRY EXTRA WORDS

Rephrase sentences so they contain more words: Turn verbs into nouns, use more descriptions, and avoid contractions.

7

REVISE INTRO AND CONCLUSION

After the draft is ready, re-check the intro and conclusion to ensure they didn't miss anything you mentioned in the body.

8

AVOID ABBREVIATIONS

Write the full names, organization titles, terms, and notions. (For example, "artificial intelligence," not "AI.")

9

SPELL OUT NUMBERS

When writing statistical data, spell out digits, percentages, and any other marks where appropriate.

10

REVERSE ESSAY OUTLINE

Read the draft from bottom to top and craft a new outline accordingly. This trick helps you notice if you missed anything you wanted to mention.

11

TRY ESSAY FORMATTING TRICKS

Expand spacing, use larger fonts, and try bigger left and right margins if possible. These tricks make essays look longer.
